Still in bed, but for a time had no fever this morning, and have a taste for other than insipid liquids. Evangeline has been a wonderful and patient companion.

Have devoured books yesterday and today. Several on Maryland and Virginia architecture, Eyck's Life of the Two Pitts and Foxes, Belloc's Cautionary Tales, Leon Blum's Mariage, Colette's La Seconde, O. Henry, Edith Hamilton's Mythology, a book of instructions (given me in Paris by Lane Rehm) on how to draw, Good Night, Sweet Prince (life of Jack Barrymore), Frank Forester's My Shooting Box, The Thunderer by M. B. (Derrydale Press) and first volume of G. M. Trevelyen's Illustrated English Social History.

Evangeline rallied and went to the Theatre Guild's Gigi tonight with Stevie. I remained bed struck.
